As told by the people who know...

Our Bakewell Puddings are still made by hand from the only verified original secret recipe and we send them to every corner of the world. They can also be enjoyed on our premises as they were meant to be eaten - served hot with custard or cream.

The property, built in the late 17th century, was owned by the Duke of Rutland until it was sold to the Wilson's by the eighth Duke in 1921.

News of the invention reached Mrs Wilson, the wife of the town's candle-maker. She recognised the opportunity to make and sell the Puddings and obtained the recipe. Mrs Wilson started the business from her cottage, which is still home to the Puddings today and is now known as The Old Original Bakewell Pudding Shop.

The recipe was the result of a misunderstanding between the mistress of the inn, Mrs Greaves, and her cook. Visiting noblemen had ordered strawberry tart, but instead of stirring the egg mixture into the pastry, the cook spread it on top of the jam - and the Pudding was an instant success.

The famous Bakewell Pudding was first made by accident in around 1860 at a local inn.
